A wide-angle photograph of a vast, flat landscape, likely a wetland or marsh. The foreground and middle ground are dominated by a dense expanse of tall, golden-brown grasses, possibly saw grass, interspersed with shallow, reflective water. The horizon is a straight, dark line. Above the horizon, the sky is a deep, vibrant blue, filled with numerous fluffy, white cumulus clouds of varying sizes, scattered across the upper two-thirds of the frame. The overall scene is bright and open, capturing a natural, serene environment.

“The miracle of the light pours over the green and brown expanse of saw grass and of water, shining and slow-moving below, the grass and water that is the meaning and the central fact of the Everglades of Florida. It is a river of grass.” – Marjory Stoneman Douglas
